

BABYCCINO KIDS blog

daily inspiration for the modern family

SUMMER PAINTS

JULY 9, 2012

My daughter's first request when she walks in from her days at pre-school are invariably "May I have a popsicle?" or "May I paint in the backyard?"

I can easily distract her first request with a plum or some other lovely summer fruit, but I can rarely stave off her desire to paint (some days I just want to read books or do a puzzle with her, call me lazy!) Lately, she has been perfectly content putting on her bikini bottoms and painting her hands and feet, making the sweetest little prints for us.

Last year I invested in a wooden caddy with six glass jars and some watercolor paints and much prefer it to the messy little pans of paint we would run through. Plus, it just looks so much nicer. I'll warn you now, the Nova Natural website is a little addictive, especially their dress-up and crafting sections!

-Elizabeth

Category: Crafts, For Kids, Indoor Activities, Toys and Games

ELIZABETH IN LOS ANGELES | 6 COMMENTS
