

SCHOOL UNIFORMS

May 27, 2011

I am all for individualism and self-expression; they are important things to teach kids - just not at 8am in the morning when the school rush is on!!! I have become very jealous of my friends in the UK who don't have a daily battle about favourite dresses... simply because their kids get to put on a school uniform everyday! It slightly upsets me a bit how important it is to my 5-year-old to wear a pretty dress (which basically means that it twirls and is pink). There seems already to be pressure from her friends about what she needs to wear.

Uniforms also seem to have moved on from the '80s, when my poor Irish cousins had to wear them. The skirts were shapeless and the colours absolutely hideous! Nowadays mustard and tan have been replaced by cute gingham and little pinafores!

I would love to hear from those whose kids wear school uniforms. Are they as great as I imagine or am I missing something?

By the way, I love the school uniform(above), though I am not sure it is a typical uniform.

Category: For Kids, Kid's Fashion

EMILIE IN PARIS | 10 COMMENTS
