

DIY: BROWN PAPER FLOWER POTS

MARCH 18, 2015

A couple of weeks ago I spotted these cute flower pots (that were really brown paper bags) neatly set down the stairs in front of some shop in Stuttgart and I loved it so much I went to buy craft paper bags and a few flowers the same day!

This is such a simple and inexpensive DIY perfect for this time of the year.

I need to say am the worst when it comes to flowers, herbs or any kind of plants in general – my husband even calls me “the plant serial killer” and I’m afraid he’s not that far from the truth! How do you people do it? I always either water too much or I forget they exist for a few days too many. But I don’t and won’t give up – one day I’ll get it. Right? But until I do I’m buying the least expensive kinds, like the ones on the photo – don’t know their names, I just know they smell good. Or at least they did for two more days after entering my house. But the good news is they are still alive!

Anyway, the steps for making these cute paper pots are super easy and you only need three items:

Brown Craft Paper Bags (mine are 12 cm wide)

Plants (mine are in 10 cm pots)

Pot Trays

First fold the top of the bag down a few times (put the pot beside the bag to see how far down).

Now fold the edges backwards along the fold lines and insert the tray first, then the flower.

That simple!

-Polona

To read more from Polona, go to her cute blog Baby Jungle!

Category: DIY for mums

POLONA | 2 COMMENTS
